Time flies, nothing stays the same, and then we die. Although the writer of Ecclesiastes is often thought to have a depressing outlook on the world, if we listen carefully, the teacher's wisdom liberates us to live fully in the here and now, secure for eternity.

She has been teaching the bible for over thirty years in a variety of settings. She is the author of the books, Unleash the Word and Liberation: How the bible Exalts and Dignifies Women.

Seminars

This year there is the option to attend two seminars when you book your ticket

Gateway to Joy - Laura Tanton

In this life, it's easy to let suffering overwhelm us and to seek joy in all the wrong places. In this session, we'll explore the life and teaching of Elisabeth Elliot, discovering that suffering is never for nothing and that with Jesus, there truly is a gateway to joy.

Church Expectations - Karen Soole

We rightly long for churches which help us love the Lord and provide supportive fellowship. We have great expectations of what the Church should be, but we can experience frustration with what it is. Our church families can experience wonderful community and fellowship, but also complicated conflicts. How can we deal with the complexities of church life in all its seasons? Is there ever a right time to leave our church family?

Everyone Belongs - Triona Brading

Join us as we explore what autism is, how we can view it through a biblical lens, and how every member of the church family can play a role in creating a more inclusive, caring community. Whether you're a parent, leader, or church member, this seminar offers practical insights to help us love one another better

Emotions: Friend or Foe? - Rebecca Stone

Our emotions are integral to who we are and part of us being made in God's image. They can be a wonderful blessing, but also a place where we most see our brokenness and sinful hearts. How can we understand them better and be open to God's sanctifying work, shaping our emotions to be more like Christ's?
